Chic Hats in All Sorts of Shapes and Colors Show Old Fashions Made Into New

(By Maybelle Mortimer.)

There have been some changes in the style of hats since the first of the season.

The very small hat perched on the side of one's head, after the fashion of Tommy Atkins, has not found the favor.

Earlier morning hats, on parade, however, many of the mid-Victorian type, are still worn.

Thackeray. These flat shapes, with their ribbon and velvet ties and their wreaths of flowers, look just as well on granddaughters of today as they did on grandmothers of other days.

There are some violent contrasts in the shapes of hats. Some are very tall and some are very flat. Only one thing marks all of them alike; the hats of this season are much smaller in the crown than they were last year. They do not set down over the ears to such a great extent.

Mustard yellow straw will be much worn this season, and on a young girl with brown hair and deep brown eyes nothing can be prettier than a mustard yellow tulle draped over the crown and down the sides.

With green chiffon and green and white bunches of cowslips and a huge bow of pale green under the rim the hat is quite new.

A queer tailored hat is made with a black hemp, downy-felt, pole-shaped brim and a black tulle fan-shaper crown. This has bunches of forget-me-nots at the back and side.

One of the very flat shapes is of cream-colored lagoon braid. Across the front is a broad band of pale lavender velvet, with the same velvet forming a bow at the back, where the shape turns up abruptly. Long wheat ears and field flowers are placed at both sides of the crown, and a couple of wheat ears are unturned with the bow at the back.

A beautiful summer lingerie hat has already made its appearance and it is striking in many ways. It is made of white or black net, with a wired ruffle forming the brim. White roses with black hearts make the whole crown, while white leaves are used instead of green.

A light straw hat covered with cream chiffon and pushed up on one side to disclose yellow flowers, a bow with streaming ends and an ostrich feather in brown does not sound as fetching as a white chiffon and cream over the left eye of a pretty girl.

Music and the Drama

The portrayal of that most difficult role of "Hamlet," which was given by Sir Johnston Forbes-Robertson last night at the Grand Opera House was undoubtedly by far the finest example of the perfection of histrionic art which has ever been seen in Hamilton. There have been great "Hamlet" boudes that of Forbes-Robertson, but none have ever had that rare ability to impress the audience with their personality and the tragical pathos of their sorry sufferings as has Forbes-Robertson. It is almost a modern tragedy that he should be withdrawing himself from the stage at the present juncture, when he is at the zenith of his fame, but he will retire with his laurels undimmed by one blemish.

Last night he gave "Hamlet" in his best, which is anonymous with saying that the finest production of drama was produced by the finest producer of drama—like when none can so faithfully "hold up the mirror to nature," as he, the author, his tragedy of heart and suffering of mind, interwoven with the expressions of his poetic soul, cynicism and sarcasm, all working up to his end, though through triumph, combined to prove to Hamiltonians what the very acme of dramatic art is capable of conveying to the observer.

A certain "Hamlet" was a splendid background for "Hamlet," starting part, her acting all through proving her wonderful ability; and that most pitiful scene, where her brother learns that she is demitted, surpassed herself.

The other parts of the cast were all equally acted. Walter Blinn, as King of Denmark; Ian Robertson, as Claudius; Charles Graham, as Laertes; and Adeline Bourne, as Gertrude, Queen of Denmark, all contributed to a performance which was an education to witness and made one feel that to reveal upon the star actor to continue on the stage until his life's work is done, was a consummation devoutly to be wished.

The theatre was well filled, and it is expected that a large number will take advantage of this the last visit to Hamilton of Forbes-Robertson, who is in "The Light That Failed," in which he is to play tonight.

Within the Law.

At the Grand next Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday will be seen "Within the Law," by Bayard Veiller, the play dealing with present conditions in New York City, which has remained the same year at the Elting Theatre.

proves that it got the worth of its money. Miss Thayer's voice is built upon grand opera lines. Where she keeps it all when in repose is hard to conjecture. But she has the quantity and the quality and it goes forth with, with thrilling freedom and clarity that quite captivates the hearers. "A most excellent company supports Miss Thayer. They were all in the artist division. All down the line the show the chorus lady who had three words to speak, there was amplified the same thoroughness. The music is splendid and inspiring. The dancing and singing of the chorus were on par with what is best in this department. The staging and costuming made a most beautiful picture throughout."

THIS WEEK AT THE TEMPLE.

This week's bill at the Temple, can easily be classed as a good show and those in attendance last evening were well satisfied. German comedians of the highest type have been through here this season, but seldom has there been a team at the Temple who possessed an act so good as the Wilson Brothers, easily the head liners of the week. Both men are fine singers and their act is full of comedy of a rare variety. Fisher and Green, in a comedy act, entitled, "The Parody," have a very pleasing little offering that came in for a great deal of applause and they were well worthy of the reception. The act is in two scenes and the comedy is bright and caustic and after entering civilization, show a comedy offering entitled "The Clown and the Human Doll," have an act that is old but always pleasing to Hamilton audiences. The don is passed among the audience and creates a stir by the amusing incidents that happen during her stay there.

While the show is a good one, it is not a new thing. The act is old but always pleasing to Hamilton audiences. The don is passed among the audience and creates a stir by the amusing incidents that happen during her stay there.

The Western Hotel Disaster Took Ten Lives

And Five Others May Have Perished

(By Times Special Writer.)

Macoun, April 21.—The correct death list resulting from the Macoun Hotel explosion is as follows:

Mr. C. Hochhaus, wife of the hotel proprietor.

Emma Hochhaus, 22, daughter.

Thomas Drake, telephone contractor.

Missor Jax, bar-tender.

Clifford Vander, hotel clerk, formerly of Vancouver.

Ford Schmidt, bar-tender.

Joe Grant, carpenter, died on the way to hospital.

James Dugan, bar-tender, International Elevator Company of Minn.

Harold Clark, Government telephone employee, Vancouver.

Harold Hecobson, son of the hotel proprietor.

There is doubt as to the fate of four Russian men, members of a telephone gang, Peter Kojan, Alphonse Menzies, Rodman Kojan and Joe Miller, all not yet accounted for. The Russian men have Mose Jax and Regina comrade travel companions missing.

The death list from the catastrophe is expected to total eleven at least. It will be difficult to identify remains in the charred remains of flesh and bones separated from the carefully shrouded debris. The proprietor of the hotel, Carl Hochhaus, is ill at the hospital.

There was no warning of the explosion, save that a hardware clerk, coming out from dinner, noticed a small of gas, and told the hotel clerk. As the clerk was in the room, he opened the cellar door the explosion came.

Mr. Peterson, the cook, was thrown on the stove, while the proprietor's second daughter and one little son of eight years in the same room were only slightly injured. The proprietor's daughter, a pet dog, and both were blown through the door. Miss Margaret Wilson, a school teacher, who comes from Fergus Falls, Ont., is not expected to live.

The hotel buildings, together with an adjoining butcher shop, owned by H. Hochhaus, and a two-story frame building, the hotel was destroyed. F. W. Curry, a very busy contractor, and it is said, was very busy at the Macoun Trading Company's store across the street, and Dr. Mitchell, a doctor, was in the building.

Corner Kaganham, of Werbner, a hotel last night, and an inquest will be held.

Hundreds of people from nearby towns, the victims of the disaster, and there are sadness and tears in many homes. The marvel is that the whole town was not consumed, as strong winds were blowing, and the only fire-fighting apparatus was a bucket brigade and a hose from the C. P. R. water tank.

Speakers describe heart-breaking scenes, the victims of the disaster, and there are sadness and tears in many homes. The marvel is that the whole town was not consumed, as strong winds were blowing, and the only fire-fighting apparatus was a bucket brigade and a hose from the C. P. R. water tank.

The Confessions of a Wife

Dick Plays Counselor and Friend

CHAPTER CXXIX.

I had just finished my letter to Kitty as the elevator stopped out in the hall and I heard Dick's quick step, rushed to the door to let him in before he could get away. "Merry, Maggie, are you still up?" "Then I looked up at the clock and found it was past two."

"Why, of course, I could not go to bed until I knew what you and Harry Symone had been doing about Elene and the twins."

"It was a awful business," said Dick, with a kind of shakiness as though he would like to rid himself of all of it, "and between you and Elene you came near launching the biggest newspaper story this town has ever known."

"How did we do that, Dick?" I asked.

"Did you girls, for a minute, think you could go over to that place and find out about the twins?"

"You see, as soon as Harry found out about the twins, he wanted me to go out there and fix up things for him. He, of course, did not know that I was not to go out there."

"I telephone to Harry to come here, and I told him that I was not to go out there. He said, 'What's the matter?'"
